Kate Peck's multifaceted career began at just 16 when she appeared on Channel Ten's Search for a Supermodel. From there, she launched into international modelling, working for fashion houses such as Alexander Wang, Bill Blass, Alexander McQueen, and Vivienne Westwood. While building her modelling portfolio, Kate simultaneously pursued online studies in marketing and journalism, showcasing her drive for growth beyond the catwalk. After a few years, she decided to pivot away from fashion to pursue a new path in television.

However, before immersing herself in the TV world, Kate embarked on a life-altering three-month motorcycle journey across Africa. Upon returning to Australia, she was named the Formula 1 Australian Grand Prix ambassador in 2012, which catapulted her into the spotlight of the motorsport world.

This exposure caught the attention of MTV Australia, where Kate became a VJ, hosting various shows and events. Soon after, she collaborated with Nat Geo People, co-producing and starring in A Model Adventure, a series that challenged her with Australia's toughest environments. Supercars, and more. Kate's work in this space allowed her to partner with top-tier brands such as Red Bull, Ducati, BMW, MINI, Lamborghini, and KTM motorcycles.

She expanded her television presence by hosting SBS's The Aus Moto Show and covering the ProMX Championship and Australian Superbike Championship. She now serves as a senior journalist for Torque Cafe, where she covers all things related to cars and motorcycling. As a passionate advocate for women in motorsport, Kate uses her platform to promote female participation in the industry. As an ambassador for the FIA Girls on Track program, she's dedicated to empowering young girls and women to pursue careers in motorsport.

She has completed her WSET 3 qualifications and is currently pursuing her WSET 4 Diploma. As a wine enthusiast, she partners with clients for wine education events and regularly writes for delicious.com.au about wine, food pairings, and related travel.
